About Draper Therapies

Pictured: Draped in Health Blankets Page 23

Draper Therapies is a division of Draper Knitting Company, a family owned and operated textile mill in Canton, MA. In operation since 1856, Draper has used their long history and family ties to enable them to change and evolve over the years. Draper's commitment to fabric innovations lead them to the Celliant® technology. In 2003, Draper Therapies was created with Celliant and its therapeutic properties as the cornerstone of everything they would create.

"We started working with Celliant early on," Kristin Draper, President, explains, "and when we saw what it could do for humans, we decided to take it to the equine and canine markets." All Draper Therapies products included in the Draper Body Therapy®, Draper Equine Therapy® and Draper Canine Therapy® lines use the technology of Celliant to provide therapeutic properties to the wearer.

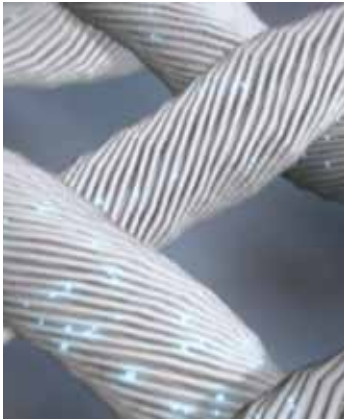

Draper Therapies strives to bring therapeutic products to the market that meet or exceed the quality expectations that Draper has demanded for over 155 years. All the products are made in the U.S. and undergo rigorous trials to make sure the products stand the test of time.

"We want to provide effortless products for those who take interest in their health and wellness, as well as the care of their animals. The Celliant therapeutic technology of these products is "IN" the fiber itself which means no complicated devices or instructions for use. The products simply take the place of previously used garments or equipment and require no out of the ordinary care as far as cleaning, storage, or an outside power source," says Kat Wojtylak, Product Manager. "We have been given rave reviews by Olympians, New York Times Best Selling Authors, and World Travelers, just to name a few. Because of this we know that no matter where our products are used, they will stand the test of time. We just want all walks of life to be feeling their best and not have pain get in their way."

What is Celliant® and How Does it Work?

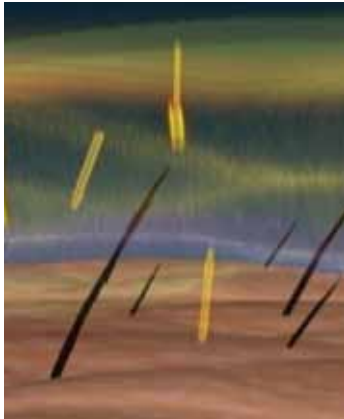

Celliant®, the technology contained in all Draper Therapies products absorbs and stores the electromagnetic (energy) emissions from the human body and releases them to be reabsorbed into the skin and deep muscle tissue. In the deep muscle tissue they act as catalysts for natural, biological processes resulting in enhanced oxygen levels and more balanced body temperature during sleep, rest or physical activity. In this way, it helps the user remain strong and active even when the product is not actively being used. It is the world's first responsive textile with clinically proven benefits to the human body.

Step 1
Celliant® is created from natural minerals and embedded into polyester fibers.

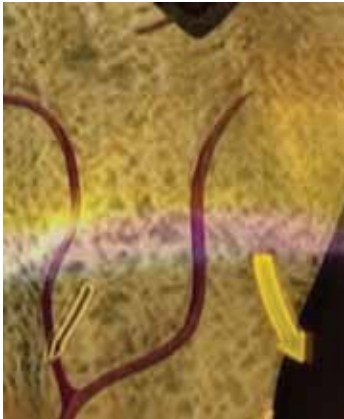

Step 2
Celliant® fibers absorb energy from the body.

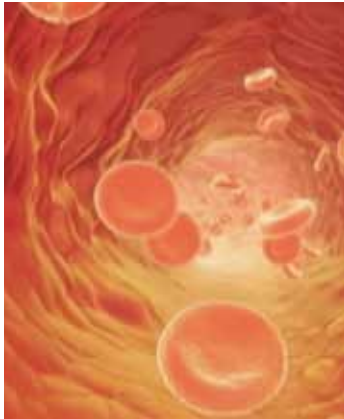

Step 3
Celliant® converts the energy into a form usable by the body.

Step 4
Celliant® converts this energy back to the body.

Step 5
This recycled energy triggers natural chemical reactions in the body.

Step 6
These reactions result in increased blood flow and oxygenation to the tissue.

For more information on the science behind Celliant® as well as to read about some of the clinical studies that have been conducted with Celliant, visit drapertherapies.com or celliant.com.

Celliant® is a registered trademark of Hologenix, LLC.

Q & A

How was Celliant® developed and why?

The research that led to the creation of Celliant began in the 1990s, when a team of pioneers in the field of alternative medicine visited Asia and observed the use of several natural substances that were thought to have a positive effect on health, healing and physical comfort. After seven years of development and several more of testing, the team was able to integrate these materials into Celliant, a technology that is added to a fiber or yarn to enhance its properties. This is done before extrusion of the polyester, which means that Celliant is not a topical treatment, it's embedded within the fiber/yarn.

Draper Therapies was created in 2003 and has continued to expand its offerings to meet the need of its canine, equine, and human customers.

Has it been clinically tested?

Yes. Celliant's efficacy has been proven in five U.S.-based clinical studies that consistently show the material's effects to be significant, compelling, and verifiable.

Celliant has been clinically proven to reduce pain, increase the oxygen levels in tissues and skin and balance body temperature while active or asleep.

You can view more information on the Clinical Studies on our website, drapertherapies.com.

What is in Celliant that makes it produce therapeutic effects?

Celliant is specially formulated with proprietary ingredients that are blended with polyester fiber. This fiber, in turn, can be woven or knit with almost any materials including wools, cottons and other polyesters. While the exact formula is a patent protected trade secret, we can say that Celliant contains many minerals including Titanium Dioxide, Silicon Dioxide and Aluminum Oxide.

Are there any side effects from using products with Celliant?

As Celliant encourages the body's natural processes, there are no known side effects. In fact, the only effects that have been found from the use of Celliant have been increased stamina, more rapid recovery, and better overall performance.

While it is possible to have an allergic reaction to any material, Celliant contains minerals that most people come into contact with on a regular basis. Since the first products became available in 2003, there have not been any reported cases of allergic reactions to Celliant.

How long do I need to use the products to get the positive effects?

Celliant starts to work immediately and the effects generally increase the longer they are used. All products are tested over at least a 90-minute period to ensure that they are effective.

How do you know it is working?

While you will not necessarily be able to perceive, or feel an increase in circulation, oxygenation or blood flow, in clinical testing we have measured the increase in skin oxygen levels (TCP02) and consistently recorded significant improvements across a wide spectrum of test subjects. People who try Celliant often observe localized pain relief and an overall improved sense of health.

How do I care for my Draper Therapies products?

All Draper Therapies products can be washed in your home washing machine and be placed in your dryer. As Celliant is embedded in the fiber, washing or drying will not alter the therapeutic properties of the fiber. Cleaning additives such as bleach and stain remover can also be used without effecting the properties of Celliant.

Does it have to come in contact with the body or skin to work?

Products enhanced with Celliant do not have to be next to the skin in order to work, but work best when in direct contact. Covering the material with additional layers will not decrease their effectiveness, but may delay their effects. Celliant will work through any type of covering including multiple layers of sheeting or clothing, laminated or waterproof fabrics, or pillowcases.

How does it directly differ from magnet or ceramic therapy?

Instead of simply warming or redirecting the magnetic fields of the muscles, Celliant works at the circulatory level, encouraging not only alleviation of pain and other negative symptoms but an actual improvement of the body's natural systems. It works with your body to help it do what it does naturally. Magnetic and ceramic therapeutic products have no clinical studies to prove their effectiveness.

DRAPER CANINE THERAPY®

“ In our position we come across hundreds if not thousands of products for canine companions yearly. Draper's canine products for sure stand the test of time and they REALLY work. Our dogs tell us immediately whether they like something or not and years later, they're still addicted to Draper. Our dogs found products for life and we found friends in the Draper girls for life.”

“Typically when you work in ever changing conditions in the field, you constantly have to change wet shirts before it starts to get cold, otherwise you run the risk of becoming hypothermic. I wear the Draper T-Shirt whenever I am able because it keeps me cool during the day and dries before it gets cold. The Draper T-Shirt even helps keep me warm when the temperature gets down below zero. I never have to add a warming layer or change a wet shirt!”

“I love my Draper Blankets and my Draper Saddle Pads that are being used every single day. I bring them home and they go in the washer and dryer, coming back with me the very next day. Aside from the therapeutic benefits, their minimal care is a huge advantage of the Draper products. My Draper t-shirt helps my back and makes a definite difference with long days of writing and/or riding. My favorite Draper products by far are the t-shirt and the Nap blanket. The Nap Blanket is easy to pack and take on a plane. I take it everywhere.”

DRAPED IN HEALTH, WELLNESS, and LOVE

Spencer Bell was an inspired and thriving young adult who took his passions as an artist seriously. Along with some of his close friends, they formed a band called the Stevdores and began working on their first album Tamuawok in 2006. It was during that time when Spencer started to develop stomach pains whom after seeing a physician, was recommended a healthier diet, more water and Prilosec.

Soon after, the pain became unmanageable and emergency care was needed. He rushed to the hospital with his younger brother Brady and a CT scan revealed a 7.5 cm tumor in his abdomen which was upon further investigation, was adrenal cancer.

Spencer ended up dying just a few days later on December 3, 2006 succumbing to a disease that is rare and relatively untreatable.

Kat Wojtylak, Product Manager for Draper Therapies® was diagnosed with thyroid cancer at the age of 22. It was through the efforts of the Spencer Bell Memorial that allowed Kat to start her healing process. “What really ties Spencer and I closer together is the fact that both he and I were caught up in endocrine cancers which affect a large number of people.

“As I write this, I now know what a good place I’m in to be able to talk about not only what happened with me, but also to share the knowledge of other similar endocrine diseases. These diseases span across species and greatly affect dogs and horses, where advances in research can be extremely valuable to all.”

Keeping with the core beliefs of Draper Therapies, having health, wellness, life and love provided to everyone is something that hits home the hardest, especially when one of their own has been affected by thyroid cancer. It has become the goal of Draper Therapies to help research blossom with other endocrine diseases where there may not be any type of treatment options as is opposite with thyroid cancer.
